

Transformational Thinking

Transformation exists all around us as a powerful reminder of the beauty in God's world. Yet, it is easy to get preoccupied with minute details and routines to which we are accustomed, missing the larger transformations happening around us. This narrow focus can lead to blind spots that work against the overall goals and mission of our organization. While it may be easier to maintain a well-trodden path than it is to blaze a new trail, inviting God to renew our thinking, makes way for holistic solutions to the obstacles we face. In this way, transformational thinking goes beyond reactive problem-solving, allowing us to design systems that provide the relevant and timely information necessary for optimizing mission impact.

If your vision for the future of your community became reality, independent of the role of your organization, what would have happened?

What fears impede the process of transformational thinking?

With your end-goal in mind, how will you overcome the obstacles in your path?

Melodi returned to public accounting in 2014 after gaining experience teaching in higher education and consulting with not-for-profits. Melodi speaks at conferences all over the United States on a variety of accounting, management and governance topics. Melodi's personable presentation skills mixed with her knowledge of the industry and real life examples gives her the ability to present on complex topics in a comprehensible way for her audience.

Melodi Bunting

CPA, CMA, CGMA, MBA

608-442-1946

melodi.bunting@wegnercpas.com